Shortly after its delivery I obtained a considerable amount of new and interesting information relating to the early history of Old Boonton; and for the purpose of introducing it into its proper place and connection I found that it would be necessary to rewrite and rearrange the whole discourse. This tedious and laborious task was performed during the year 1860, with the intention of redelivering it at that time; but, owing to the then distracted condition of our country, its delivery was deferred until the year 1867, at which time it was redelivered as it now stands. It was originally written in three parts, under the caption of Broonton - Past, Present and Future. I now present it exactly as it was delivered in 1867, divided under the three following headings: Part First - Old Boonton; Part Second - Boonton; Part Third - Miscellaneous Facts and Speculations. At the first delivery of this discourse, in 1859, there was a large and appreciative audience present, and parts one and two were well received; but part three, the Future, was pretty sharply criticised and ridiculed by few of the gentlemen then present. The visual organs of those gentlemen were not then quite keen enough to see things as yet unseen, and they denounced many of my well-planned...
