Tf this discharge continues, the gravity of the electrolyte may fall as low as 1.100 or even lower, but should never be allowed to fall this low, as when gravity reaches this point, lead sulphate forms very rapidly on the plates; the voltage of the cell becomes very low and the cell in this condition will readily freeze in cold weather. The gravity of the cell should never be allowed to drop below 1.250, and should be maintained as nearly as possible at a point between 1.275 and 1.300. The process of charge and the process of discharge should never be carried out at too high a rate as the chemical action taking place in the cell will produce a high degree of temperature and the plates will warp or buckle, allowing the active material to fall from them and to accumulate...
