Murray, the twelfth Comptroller of the Currency, was appointed April 28, 1908. He was born in Steuben County, New York, in 1864. He was educated at Addison College, Niagara University, and the Metropolis Law School of New York, and was admitted to the bar in New York City in 1893. He first entered the service of the Federal Government as private secretary to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis, under President Cleveland's second administration, and later was appointed chief of the organization division in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency. In September, 1898, he was appointed Deputy Comptroller of the Currency. He retained this place ten months and resigned on June 27, 1899, to accept the position of trust officer in the Trust Company of America, of New York City, a new organization. He remained with this company three years and then became secretary and trust officer of the Central Trust Company of Illinois at Chicago, organized by Charles G. Dawes, former Comptroller of the Currency, who was president of the company. He resigned this position to accept appointment as Assistant Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor in January, 1904, and continued in that position until appointed Comptroller of the Currency. His only banking experience was that of trust officer in two trust companies, the principal duties of which were to pass upon the legal form of papers. His appointment as Comptroller was purely a personal one on the part of President Roosevelt. Mr. Murray qualified as Comptroller April 28, 1908, but...
